Opportunity Is Here

Athletics = Academics

- The core values that are being taught to our athletes on the court and on the field are crucial to success in the classroom
- These values: Accountability, Integrity, Structure, and Discipline help to create a more engaged, driven student.
- Data from the US Department of Education shows that students who do not participate in extracurricular activities are 49% more likely to use drugs.
- These students are also 37% more likely to become teen parents.

Athletics = Academics

- The Harvard Educational Review determined that extracurricular activities such as athletics appear to be one of the few interventions that benefit low status, disadvantaged students – those less well served by traditional education programs-as much or more than their advantaged peers.

Athletics = Academics

- The AISD Office of Research & Evaluation did an independent study and found that student athletes in AISD showed the following performance method.
- 5% higher attendance by student athletes vs students not in athletics
- 2% in social studies
- 4% higher academic performance in reading
- Over 4% in science
- 7% in math

Athletics = Academics

- Student athletes also demonstrated:
- 7% higher promotion rate to the next grade
- 5% lower rate of discipline problems
- Over 16% higher graduation rate

Athletic Participation

In addition to the amazing results we just saw, athletics works to develop the whole child. It helps keep kids off the streets, raises the accountability level for passing grades, and creates more responsible young men and women.
