EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

During the Reinvest phase, Austin ISD hosted community meetings following the publication of the School Changes Version 1.0 document, which included 39 scenario options. Each scenario option served as a starting point for input to improve academics, equity and facilities across our school district. An estimated 1,700 people participated in a series of 21 community conversations. The formal community engagement process ended on Oct. 10, 2019.

Active Listening Sessions

The community conversations were held in schools that may be affected by the proposed scenario options. The active listening sessions focused on gathering feedback from campus communities on:

1. “What do you like about this scenario option and what do you see as strengths?”
2. “What concerns do you have about this scenario option and what else is missing?”

Of the 1,696 parents, students, Austin ISD employees and community members who attended the community conversations, many attendees participated in multiple sessions over the course of four weeks.

The meetings were held primarily at schools included in the document as a proposed consolidation or closure. Schools included were Pease Elementary, Metz Elementary, Sims Elementary, Webb Middle School, Brooke Elementary, Maplewood Elementary, Ridgetop Elementary, Palm Elementary, Joslin Elementary, Dawson Elementary, Bertha Sadler Means, and Pecan Springs Elementary. These meetings were scheduled based on input from principals with the intent of reaching as many parents as possible, and were scheduled during mornings, evenings hours, as well as on Saturday. Meetings held at an elementary school were typically held in the mornings, while middle and high school meetings were held in the evenings. Childcare and refreshments were also provided, and simultaneous language interpretation was available at every meeting.

To facilitate a healthy dialogue the room was set up in a large circle. This meeting style offered everyone the chance to sit down, facing each other, and to create the opportunity for collaboration with parents, community and Austin ISD staff. A lead facilitator supported the flow of the conversation engaging parents, teachers, students and subject matter experts from Austin ISD. The meetings lasted anywhere from two to six hours.

In addition to the meetings, Austin ISD collected feedback from the community through an online tool called ThoughtExchange. More than 2,764 comments were received, and the comments are included in the summary.

In the Reinvest phase, administration at Austin ISD recommended scenario options to the Board of Trustees after listening to the community through a robust engagement series and in consideration of the board-adopted guiding principles with equity in mind. Austin ISD wants to fundamentally change the way they deliver education to students, how they train and engage with staff, and how they make decisions around equity to ensure access and opportunity for all students in our district.

The communications and community engagement team produced a report that contains themes, ideas and concerns that we heard during the community engagement meetings. The report was shared during the evaluation of the scenario options.

A majority of the feedback from parents and the community expressed concern about the proposed school closures and their lack of trust in Austin ISD’s process and timeline. Several themes emerged, which are highlighted in this report, along with specific ideas suggested by participants for the district’s consideration.
Parents and community members foresee difficulty in merging the culture of schools that are consolidated in terms of size, community and programs.

Parents expressed concerns about the emotional well-being of teachers, students, and staff, given the uncertainty in the timeline and future bond. Parents also want continuity of teaching staff.

Parents and community members expressed frustration and lack of trust that the decision-making timeline is too short for there to be ample and thoughtful consideration of community feedback and full evaluation of all potential options.

Parents and community members requested the matrix, data and decision-making rationale. The lack of transparency in sharing the data was pointed out as a significant hurdle for the community to trust the district’s intentions.

Parents expressed being perplexed that boundaries are not being addressed as part of the scenario options. Several campus communities believed their boundaries were the reason their campus is currently underutilized.

Parents and community members questioned the level of inequity in the plan in terms of impacts to lower socio-economic status and students of color. Also, the east-west divide was discussed in every meeting, and there is a belief that the plan perpetuates Austin’s racist past and present.

Parents and community members shared their questions about what happens to the buildings and real estate once facilities are closed and how that process is carried out by Austin ISD.

Parents and community members were skeptical of the potential of a successful bond program in order to facilitate the modernization of schools on the closure list that currently have renovation/facility improvement needs that are unfunded.

Parents and community members voiced concern about moving students to lower performing schools or buildings that are in worse condition than the ones they are currently schooled.

Parents and community members requested that Austin ISD review and adjust feeder patterns to create greater continuity of academic programs for students.

Parents and community members want Austin ISD to ensure that students who transfer to the affected campuses are “grandfathered” in or there is a clear plan for continuity for students.

We also recorded the repeated concerns expressed about the loss of AISD students due to competition with charters.
